From 2011-2017, I served as Dean of American University's School of International Service (SIS), overseeing 120 full-time faculty members, 70 staff, and 3,000 undergraduate, master's and doctoral students on campus and online. During my final two years as dean, I served as president of the Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs. I currently co-direct the Bridging the Gap (BtG) project, which trains, mentors and advocates for scholars of political science, international relations, and public policy to engage with policy communities and the public, and I am one of the co-editors of the Oxford University Press BtG book series.

HIGHLIGHTS AS DEAN

- Hired a diverse, multidisciplinary group of 26 tenure-line faculty – including those who study governance, global health, urban ecology, environmental sustainability, terrorism and national security, resource management, and racism, as well as experts on China, India and Russia. Brought other notables such as Ambassador Susan Rice and J. Ann Tickner to the School in residence.
- Initiated an innovative partnership with the leading online education provider 2U, creating the first online Master of Arts in International Relations (MAIR) in the United States, and launched the online Master of International Service (MIS) executive education degree. The SIS online programs now enroll approximately 300 students – one-third of whom are active duty U.S. military or veterans.
- Created an office to support faculty research and hired a team of dedicated professionals to work closely with faculty in their pursuit of external funding for research and other School partnerships.
- Launched the SIS Advisory Council on Diversity and Inclusion to raise awareness of diversity issues in international affairs, expand career pathways for historically underrepresented students, and create a more inclusive community.
- Led the transformation of the School's undergraduate and graduate curricula, including the introduction of new first-year seminars taught by full-time faculty for all incoming SIS undergraduates, a new capstone experience for graduate students to work in small teams on projects with external partners, and increased skills training for undergraduate and graduate students.
- Completed the fundraising for the SIS building and generated substantial new revenues to support student scholarships, internships and study abroad.
- Built a communications infrastructure in order to better inform internal and external audiences of the accomplishments of students, faculty, staff and alumni.
- Established the SIS Office of Career Development in order to better serve undergraduate and graduate students and to assist alumni at any stage of their careers.
- Hosted numerous world leaders including U.S. President Barack Obama, Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, and Chinese Vice-Premier Liu Yandong.

CURRENT APPOINTMENTS

In addition to my tenured faculty appointment as Professor of International Relations at the School of International Service at American University, I am currently a Visiting Senior Fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations.

PRIOR FACULTY AND ADMINISTRATIVE APPOINTMENTS

I taught my first class as a lecturer at the University of California, Berkeley in 1988. After finishing my Ph.D., I taught for three years as a tenure-track assistant professor at Cornell University before moving to George Washington University, where I received tenure in 1998. At GWU, I directed the Institute for European, Russian and Eurasian Studies and taught until 2011, when I left to become dean at American University.

EDUCATION

I received my A.B. in Government magna cum laude from Harvard College in 1983, and then received my M.A. (1985) and Ph.D. (1990) in Political Science from the University of California, Berkeley, where I received the Peter H. Odegard Memorial Award for Outstanding Achievement as a Distinguished Doctoral Candidate.

FELLOWSHIPS

I have held numerous fellowships, including Library of Congress Chair in U.S.-Russia Relations (2018-19), Transatlantic Academy Fellow at the German Marshall Fund (2010-2011), Whitney Shepardson Senior Fellow for Transatlantic Relations at the Council on Foreign Relations (2007-2010), Edward Teller National Fellow (2009) and W. Glenn Campbell and Rita Ricardo-Campbell National Fellow (2008) at the Hoover Institution (2008), Public Policy Scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars (2007), Whitney H. Shepardson Fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations (2006-07), Policy Research Scholar at the George Washington Institute of Public Policy (2005-07), Henry A. Kissinger Chair in Foreign Policy and International Relations at the Library of Congress (2005-06), Visiting Fellow at The Brookings Institution (1998-99), Visiting Pre-doctoral and Post-doctoral Fellow at the Center for International Security and Arms Control, Stanford University (September 1989 - December 1990), and dissertation fellow at the Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation (1987-88).

In 1995-96, I was a Council on Foreign Relations International Affairs Fellow at the State Department and on the National Security Council staff, where I served as a director of Russian, Ukrainian and Eurasian Affairs.

CURRENT PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

I serve as co-director of the Bridging the Gap project and co-editor of the Oxford University Press Bridging the Gap Book Series. In addition, I serve as a member of the International Studies Association International Security Studies Section Task Force on Diversity and Inclusion, the Strategic Committee of the Paris School of International Affairs, the Editorial Board of the Texas National Security Review, and the Teaching, Research, and International Policy (TRIP) Policy Survey Advisory Board. I am also a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Each June, I co-lead a module with Andrew Moravcsik and Elizabeth Saunders on Historiography and Archival Research at the Institute for Qualitative and Multi-Method Research at Syracuse University.

WORKSHOPS AND CONFERENCES CONVENED

As co-director of Bridging the Gap, I help convene the annual New Era workshop for Ph.D. students and post-docs and the annual International Policy Summer Institute for faculty. In addition, I led two workshops for senior administrators from across the country to discuss efforts to help faculty increase their policy and public engagement: an all-day meeting with thirteen university provosts in June 2016 was followed by a workshop with provosts and foundation representatives that led to an article in the Chronicle of Higher Education.

At George Washington University, I helped develop the annual Summer Institute on Conducting Archival Research and the GWU-UC Santa Barbara-London School of Economics annual graduate student conference on the Cold War as well as other major conferences as part of our George University Cold War group.

SELECT PRIOR PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

I have engaged in a wide variety of professional service, including President of the Association of Professional Schools of International Affairs and co-chair of the Board of Directors of the Public Policy and International Affairs Program.

For the Council on Foreign Relations, I have served as chair of the International Affairs Fellowship Selection Committee and co-chair of the Term Member Advisory Committee, and I have been a member of the Committee on Studies and the Life Membership Committee.

I have served on a number of university external review committees, including for St. Gallen University's Program in International Affairs, the Naval War College Department of National Security Affairs, the Josef Korbel School of International Studies at the University of Denver, the University of Washington Jackson School of Global Affairs, and the Columbia University School of International and Public Affairs (chair).

I have served on peer review panels for the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and the United States Institute of Peace.
